The landscape of Blockchain technology since 2008 developed into an heterogeneous ecosystem with more than 5000 cryptocurrencies and an overall market capitalization larger than 257,000,000,000 USD as of may 2020. In this context scholars exposed the need for establishing standards in the development, classification and assessment of these systems. Some authors proposed a taxonomy of such systems capturing the impact of many of the possible design choices on performance and main qualitative aspects of a desirable Blockchain.
